

10-1-2016

Introduction

Cynthia Ford

Alexander Blewett III School of Law at the University of Montana, cynthia.ford@umontana.edu

Follow this and additional works at: <https://scholarship.law.umt.edu/mlr>

Part of the Law Commons

Recommended Citation

Cynthia Ford, Introduction, 77 Mont. L. Rev. 231 (2016).

Available at: <https://scholarship.law.umt.edu/mlr/vol77/iss2/1>

This Foreword is brought to you for free and open access by The Scholarly Forum @ Montana Law. It has been accepted for inclusion in Montana Law Review by an authorized editor of The Scholarly Forum @ Montana Law.

FOREWORD

INTRODUCTION

Cynthia Ford

Judge Carolyn Ostby, the first female judge in the U.S. District Court for the District of Montana, will retire on December 1, 2016. The University of Montana School of Law (as it was known when she attended and graduated), this very Law Review, the State of Montana, the federal judiciary, and the citizens of Montana and the world all have benefitted greatly from Judge Ostby's unique combination of intellect, compassion, and composure.

Judge Ostby grew up in Wolf Point, Montana, near her father's family's homestead. The three children in the Ostby family all valued education and achieved success in their own fields: Carolyn in law, Nancy (Aagenes) in naturopathic medicine and Alan Ostby in psychology. After high school, Carolyn left Montana to attend Macalester College in St. Paul, Minnesota, but returned for law school. Carolyn received her J.D. from UMLS in 1977 with High Honors. She was an editor of the Montana Law Review and received the SCRIBES (the American Society of Writers on Legal Subjects) Award, presented to the outstanding member of the Montana Law Review. One of the expressed purposes of the award is to "foster clear, succinct, and forcible style in legal writing." Judge Ostby's legal writing, both as a lawyer and as judge, shows the SCRIBES award met its mark.

Judge Ostby began her career as a law clerk to the legendary U.S. District Court Judge Russell Smith in Missoula. (The federal courthouse in Missoula is named after Judge Smith). Notably, two of UM's most prestigious faculty members wrote letters of reference supporting Carolyn's clerkship application: Dean Robert Sullivan and Professor Duke Crowley, neither known for his feminism. After her clerkship, Judge Ostby was selected to the prestigious Honors Program at the U.S. Department of Justice in D.C., where she worked for two years before again returning to Montana.

In 1982, Judge Ostby joined the prominent Billings law firm then known as Crowley, Haughey, Hanson, Toole and Dietrich. At that time, “the Crowley Firm” had only one office, and fewer than 30 attorneys, but its five named partners all were themselves legendary icons of the Montana Bar and, collectively, were wise enough to lure Carolyn Ostby away from the DOJ. Carolyn was the fourth woman lawyer at the firm, and ended up being the only one who stayed on for an entire career.¹

Carolyn was the consummate litigator: smart, fair, honest, and very prepared. She writes well and thinks better, both without any bombast. Among her many honors, Carolyn is a member of the American College of Trial Lawyers, “limited to only those trial lawyers who are unquestionably and eminently qualified, in addition to being regarded as the best in their state/province. Qualifications must include high ethical and moral standards, as well as excellent character. . .” Carolyn’s practice included complex commercial litigation and natural resource litigation.

After 20 years in front of the bench in both jury and non-jury trials, in 2002 Carolyn was selected by the three federal judges in the U.S. District of Montana to sit on the federal bench as a Magistrate Judge. Fourteen years later, it is clear that the appointment of Judge Ostby was inspired. United States District Judge United States District Judge Gustavo A. Gelpí, Jr. summarized the importance of this job:

The Magistrate Judge is the face of federal courts across the nation whenever a criminal defendant, his family and friends, and any victims first walk into a federal courtroom. Likewise, in an increasing number of civil proceedings, the parties will come to court for the first time to meet a Magistrate Judge in a mediation or other proceeding.²

Judge Ostby embodied the best possible face for the federal system to all who entered her courtroom: lawyers, staff, parties, victims, and the public as a whole. As Chief Judge Dana Christensen observed when he announced Judge Ostby’s retirement:

Throughout her distinguished career, Judge Ostby has set a fine example for others to follow. Although possessed of a sharp intellect and known for her exacting scrutiny of legal arguments, she is unfailingly courteous, fair, and reasonable, and treats every person who appears before her with dignity and respect.

1. I left for Seattle, and then came back to teach; Laura Mitchell decided to devote herself to her twin girls; and Sherry Matteucci became the first female U.S. Attorney in Montana history

2. <http://www.fedbar.org/PDFs/A-Guide-to-the-Federal-Magistrate-Judge-System.aspx?FT=.pdf>, quoting THE FEDERAL LAWYER (May/June 2014).

Judge Ostby brought her whole self to each case, every day. In recognition of her attentiveness, ability, and judiciousness, many elected to forego their right to ultimate resolution by an Article III judge and placed the merits of their cases in Judge Ostby's capable hands. Thus, she handled a lot of cases and handled them well, first working in Great Falls and later transferring back to her professional hometown of Billings. A quick survey of cases on WestlawNext for this year, 2016, alone, disclosed 13 opinions by Judge Ostby, reviewed by U.S. District Judge Susan Watters. In most of the cases, the parties did not file objections to Judge Ostby's determinations (but they still are reviewed for plain error). Objection or not, Judge Watters affirmed 100% of these, with only 1 minor change in 1 of the 13 cases.

Judge Ostby's impact is not limited to Montana. As a member of the federal judiciary, Judge Ostby was invited to join the very select Committee on International Judicial Relations of the United States Judicial Conference. As a committee member, she has represented the third branch of our government in several nations where rule of law has not always been the rule, with the goal of assisting with the administration of justice worldwide. One of her first trips was to South Africa. Most recently, Judge Ostby returned from a whirlwind trip to Egypt, where she met with Egyptian lawyers and judges, and appeared on local television. Judge Ostby plans to continue her invaluable work with this committee even after her retirement.

With this litany of professional accomplishments, one might assume that Judge Ostby was entitled to a big case of "black robe disease." Nothing could be further from the truth. We know Judge Ostby to be amazingly extraordinary (the gushing is conscious); she thinks of herself as simply normal, just doing the best she can. My favorite story ever about the judge is a time when she came to Missoula to conduct a hearing and we had agreed to have breakfast before our workdays began. I suggested 7:00 a.m., but Judge Ostby asked for a delay so that she could finish washing and drying the sheets on her mother-in-law's guest bed. How many other federal judges, in Montana or anywhere, are that thoughtful?³

Carolyn was dedicated to her work, but she was not all about work. I can't discuss here that night at the cowboy bar, before the kids were born. I can report on her dedication to her family, and her great pride in her stellar children, Paul and Helen. Carolyn was an early pioneer in the difficult arena of combining mothering with lawyering. She once packed up baby Paul and his nanny and headed across the country with senior partner Bruce Toole to take depositions in a large civil case. Later, when Carolyn was assigned to sit in Great Falls for five long years, she made the drive to Billings and

3. If you, dear reader, ARE also a federal judge, I am sure that you (not your spouse!), too, change/wash/replace the linens when you stay at someone's home. If you haven't ever done that, there is always next time. Ditto for you law professors out there. . .

back almost every weekend so that her family wouldn't have to relocate with her. As is her norm, Carolyn never complained about the toll the dual demands of career and family imposed: she just sucked it up and got 'er done, all the while making it look effortless (which it was not!). Now that Paul is a lawyer himself and Helen has been able to combine her education with the love for travel she inherited from her mother, Judge Ostby still remains actively supportive of both from her base in Billings.

There is so much more to Judge Ostby than work and family. Carolyn is a testament to work/life balance in the best sense. She keeps in touch with old friends (of whom I am one of many) and makes new ones easily. She is a patron of the Yellowstone Art Center, and an avid reader. She is an accomplished outdoorswoman and athlete. She has, and uses well: skis, a yoga mat, more than one good bicycle, a beautiful canoe, a gym membership, and backpacking gear. Now, starting on December 1, she will be able to put more of these to better use, without worrying about all the cases on her desk.

The good news is that Judge Ostby's past record indicates that she will continue to contribute meaningfully to the bar and public of our great state and beyond: retirement simply marks the end of a chapter, not the end of the book. I can't wait to read the next chapter.